This Earth Day, the CCCA celebrates local neighbors who have taken steps to green their homes! Please join us for a lively discussion with Nina Dodge, Romina Comolli, and Alfredo Abal, as we learn about eco-strategies -- such as home conversion to electric, solar, insulation, and home energy audits -- that these homeowners used to ensure their home environment was as sustainable and eco-friendly as possible. The panel will also highlight incentives available from the Federal and local government to reduce overall project costs.

This tour covers a little over a mile and encompasses 300 years of history. You'll encounter vestiges of colonial-era plantations, connections to our founding fathers and the nation's first infrastructure project, the Civil War, descent into Jim Crow and displacement, the Gilded Age, and the buildout of the community we see today. The struggle for Civil Rights and partial home rule are also part of the local history.
